The Langevin Dinner at Quebec

No careful student has failed to notice in tracing the history of ancient and modern, civilized and barbarous nations, the wonderful influence that feasting has had upon society. It is said that an hman can do nothing without a dinner; and we, Canadians seem likely to perpetuate the Old Country usage on our end of the American Continent. From Ontario to Nova Scotia dinners are reported everywhere, both Ministerial and Opposition. The last one, however, that we note, was that given on November 7th, at Quebec, to the Hon, Mr. Langevin, who was entertaised in a similar menner in this city on his recent visit. As a matter of course, the dinner was a political one; for among those was a political one; for among those present, we notice, Gov. Belleau, Sir There, is not much that is new in else. Naturally enough then our readers will like to know what was said and done. We will try and gratify their vin's speech. "Quoting from the Globe's great Dominion without their assistance report it is as follows :-Hon, Mr. Langevin returned thanks for the Privy Council by this magnificent demonstration which was due to the confidence felt in them and of which they were justly proud. them and of which they were justly proud. It was more welcome coming from both sections of the population, French and English. He had ever experienced kindness from the Quebec and Durchester constituencies. He would never forget, them, nor neglect an opportunity of serving their interests, and the interests of this Province. When he entered Parliament, representation by population was the principal question before the country; the Lower Canadian representatives could not admit that principle, because the general and local legislation resting with one legislature, it meant the domination of one Province over it meant the domination of one Province over the other. Lower Canada, acting in her usual broad and liberal spirit, showed readiness to meet the difficulty in a statesmanli way, and her representatives received over-tures for Confederation in a frank and loyal manner. The four Provinces formerly separated are now united, prosperous, contented, happy. Manitoba and the Northwest are now joined to them, and out of this territory four or five other large Provinces will one day be organized and form together one of the most thriving and wealthy portions of the most nion. Were we to stop at the Rocky Moun-tains? Very few thought so. Ministers con-sidered the most passions policy was to treat British Columbia liberally to make her enter Confederation with a gladsome heart, and as prosperous and happy as ourselves. It was one of the most healthy and promising of the Provinces in all of which he had met with, an intelligent, industrious, hard-working, loyal and contented people. British Colum-bia's population might not be homogeneous, but its elements were far from being a source but its elements were far from being a source of weakness; its white population would de honor to any community; its Indian inhabitants were consumers of dutiable goods to tants were consumers of dutiable goods to New styles arrived by mountain Ash to-day Reaton & Tunstall. tants were consumers of dutiable goods to such an extent as to make them an important source of revenue to the Contederation. The Indians had been a great belp to the whites in the settlement and business. The Chinese too had proved useful in supplying cheap labor. He glanced at British Columbia's physical character and resources. He had seen hundreds of thousands of acres of good land already yielding largely, wheat, barley, oats and other products, producing as much as forty bushels to the acre. He found also immense prairies of grazing land, in many cases covered with sheep and cattle which could be left with safety out of deers the whole year, and even untended, as they could themselves find enough to eat. He saw rich mineral lands, giving a bounteens harvest of gold, silver, and other minerals; coal fields which, with those of Nova Scotia, could supply the navies of Great Britain and the great industries of the world for centuries. There were also magnificent forests of grand trees, very many 120 feet high, witbout a branch or knot for 60 to 90 feet, and 6 to 7 feet in diameter. The resources were immense, promising a glorious future for that Province. Its salmon fisheries were, perhaps, the most prolific in the world, and, in bis opinion, inexhaustible. The other fisheries completed a splendid additional resource. The climate of a large postion of the Province and of Vancouver Island was mild and pleasant, in many respects as good as England's, and in some preferable. The incorporation of this Province with Canada was necessary and justifiable, both in a political and material sense; it gave the finishing stroke to Confederation, and secured a trans-continental rallway, by which the trade of a large section of the globe must flow. It would give the shortest route between Europe and Asia, and afford valuable commers cial facilities to Quebec merchants, of which he urged them to take every advantage. Quebec city has given the lie to those who predicted its downfall aftee, each calamity; and now its industri and now its industries were more thriving and its prospects brighter than for the last decade. The Pacific Railway would add to its trade, for it would become the carrier for the Dominion. The Intercolonial Railway would co-operate to bind the Provinces, and augment the prosperity of the country in various ways. These railways would attract great numbers of laborers and immigrants, whom it was our duty and our interest to inwite and secure. Every settler was a new source of health. Let them come from all nations. There is space for all—all we need. Our public men desired the success of Confederation that we might have a country of which our children's children might be proud; which should perpetuate the great representative institutions of England, a country wealthy, powerful and respected; and with the assistance of the people we were sure to attain that end. For nearly five years we had been bonored with their support; and the people knew we had the welface of the Dominion at heart; that we were devoting ourselves to its prosperity and happiness; that support was required in future to complete the great work, and he had no doubt it would be given, judging from the present demonstration. He exhorted Union to fulfil the destines predicted of us. We had as goed a climate, soil and people, and as much true liberty as any other people. Let us be patriotic enough to put a side jeal-outsies and selfishness, and work for the good of all, availing ourselves of the great blessings with which a kind providence had endowed us. (Cheers.) Doubtless when a full report of the speech shall have come to hand, we shall and with the assistance of the people we

"He eulogized the temper and liberality of Lower Canada, in which all creeds dwelt in harmony, offering a worthy example to other countries. His principle and motive of action throughout life had been justice to all origins and denominations, in which respect he had enjoyed the sympathy and support of Mr. Langevin and other Lower Canadians. He prized Confederation and its results, and claimed for Canada an economical, vigorous and wise Government. Our great Confederation extended from sea to sea, offering a ation extended from sea to sea, offering a spectacle of growth, development, unity and order salutary to other nations, England in-cluded. Agitated and imperilled by social-political theorists, determined to overturn an ancient order of things, Canada would serve Bugland in furnishing arguments against Re-publicanism and the doctrines of Beadlaugh, Odger, and Goldwin Smith. (Applause.) He (Sir George E. Cartier) repudiated the notion that England cared nothing for the connection with the Dominion. Her power are reported everywhere, both Ministeri- was power through and by the expansion of which the Colouies formed a means. The

Mr. Howe,—four Ministers besides "the Guest of the particular, are to be taught a lesson for their good by Canada. Sir Francis Evening,"—surrounded by about four hundred of their fellow-citizens. It was a political demonstration, and nothing their good by Canada. Sir Francis Hineks said nothing except to endorse Sir George and Mr. Langevin. The Hon. Mr. Howe did say something, the COMMISSION MERCHANTS chief point of interest being that "He told them"—that is the Opposition leaders-"in the presence of all Canada, that Ministers knew enough to keep them in COMMERCIAL ROW, WHARF STREET, curiosity, -particularly as to Mr. Lange- their places and to rule and govern this

OMINECA-HEAVY LOSS OF PACK TRAINS.

QUESNELLE, Nov. 14th, 1871. EDITOR STANDARD :- Winter is setting in here. For the last week it has been snowing and freezing hard; the river is full of slush ice, and the steamer was laid up for the time being. With the cold weather have come many Omineca miners, so that it would last week, all full of men, and mostly old last week, all full of men, and mostly old

PACKERS HAVE SUPPERED heavily ; one had lost fifty-three animals, and wo or three, had lost three entire trains. Provisions were scarce at Stewart's Lake, so that they were on short commons most the way down; and I tell you the way they walked into the "grub," was a caution:

GAMBLING. Some who have money will go through it ing finely at present. There are SWARMS OF CHINAMEN about, and you can see poor "John" in all his glory, if you will first take a walk up dark, and enter a Chinese restaurant, called "The House of Blazes," so called from the fiery quality of the whiskey, and casting made on the Sound, was executed last and because the conversation consists mostly f sanguinary consignments to a place somewhat hotter than the tropics. There you will find the "Heathen Chinee" gambling with Spaniards, half breeds and natives of both sexes, who all have the greatest contempt for poor John, and show it by winning his money if they can, although very often be p oves more than a match for them. This aises their ire, and the din gets louder and louder, till you would fancy 'twas Bedlam let loose. I suppose John likes it. The sources of amusement were for any class or plour are very slim. Billiards, Seven-up, or Poker are expensive and tiring, and involve the consumption of considerable back whiskey, or the amoking of as eaqually vile segars. So very few will winter here. The aspect of the place is anything but pleasing at present, and none will care to stop if he can possibly get away.

THE THERMOMETER too, often stands at forty-five below zero, and snow is two or three feet deep, with nothing to break the monotony of a four months winter like this, except an extra heavy storm, or the fortnightly arrival of the express, UP COURTRY PREIGHTS are at present five cents per pound, but are sure to fall when sleighing gets good. TEAMING will be pretty brisk this winter, as there ar arge quantities of goods lying here, waiting shipment. Hay and grain are scarce. Hay is three cents per pound, burley and oats eight cents. Some more boats are expected in a few days, which will be the LAST PLICKER OF EXCITEMENT

this fall. We shall then retire to our store and quietly snooze away the winter till spring comes again, with its smiles and when we will awaken to fresh life, shaking off our lethargy and push into activity those off our lethargy and push into activity those plans and speculations which have been allowed hatching in our brains while we have HOPED THAT NEXT YEAR'S RETURNS will be more ratisfactorly than this one has been; for although local trade to a certain extent has been good, yet the results from Omineca both as to the yield of gold and from business of all kinds connected with that country, have not nearly come up to the expectations formed.

Next year we shall be better able to say what that country really is worth, as there are better trails, and the next season will begin with a far better and cheaper stock of provisions than this did.

Who are Qualified to Govern?

EDITOR STANDARD :-- We are very after told that the people are not qualified to manage that the people are not qualified to manage their own governmental affairs. Let us see what kind of people it requires to make a practical use of the power to govern them selves; for wherever the right kind is wanting, the government will only be a miserable makeshift. They must be bold, daring, persevering and energetic, ready to take advan-tage of any new idea which is calculated to improve their condition and benefit the human family. They must be well educated, and thoroughly understand the laws of political economy, able to judge of cause and effect of any new law without the necessity of putting it into practice to find it out. They must be continually watching the conduct of their officials, and very freely exercise the right of examining and criticising all their proceed-ings; checking them whenever they are doing anything detrimental to their welfare, and if Newsoundland. — Two anti-Confederate turn them out of office by a plan similar to that which put them in, and then compel them to make good all the loss they have occasioned. This would be a bong fide Responsible Government. As for what is now sham and a delusion, a mere pretense and a gross deception to amuse and gull the public.

Foreigners comment severely on the action of the American Government abandoning intrroourse with the Coreaus.

About 2 a, m., on the 23rd of September, the fire bells gave the note of alarm, and a few minutes afterward a dense cloud of smoke was seen to issue from the Caille de la Planchada, which was soon followed by a sheet of lurid flames. A strong northerly breeze was blowing at the time, and everything appeared to indicate that the city was to be visited by a disaster equal to that of the 13th of November, 1858. The firemen turned out

S. member of the English Parliament, J. F. Dalrymple Hay, son of Admiral Sir John Hay, M. F.; the Hon. W. S. Campbell, late U. S. Consul at Rotterdam, left for Europe overland this morning. They came out at the invitation of J. Ross Browne, to investigate a Tule Lands Reclamation project and prospectus, and carry back full and favorable reports, and the strongest possible endorsements of the project, by leading bankers, merchants, business men and State officers. The syndicate formed at the suggestion of J. Ross Browne is conditional upon the result of this investigation, and will invest at least five millious immediately in the purchase and reclamation of these lands in the deltas of the San Josquin and Sacramento. The enormous yield of wheat and vegetables in the reclaimed lands surprised and delighted the confirms the representations of Mr. Browne.
